Law School Admission Guide by Ann K. Levine Offers Practical Tips and Insider Advice for Today's Law School Applicants

In The Law School Admission Game: Play Like an Expert, the former director of admissions at two ABA law schools shares powerful strategies for successful essays, resumes, and more!

SANTA BARBARA, CA — Applying for law school can be a complicated and daunting process, but knowing what a law school admissions committee is looking for can make all the difference.

As a former director of admissions, Ann K. Levine, Esq., has experience reviewing applications and making admission decisions at two ABA law schools. She shares her first-hand insight into the application process in her new book The Law School Admission Game: Play Like an Expert.

"Much of what [Levine] has to say parallels my own experience having reviewed more than 35,000 application admissions to law school," said Charles Roboski, Assistant Dean of Admissions and Financial Aid at Michigan State University College of Law.

In addition to providing insider knowledge and expert lawyer perspectives, Levine's law school admission guide addresses crucial topics relevant to today's law school applicants, like paying for higher education and the impact of law school rankings on admission decisions.

Levine also shares powerful strategies for success in regard to:

- * Writing Winning Personal Statements and Resumes
- * Explaining a Low LSAT or GPA
- * Getting the Best - and Avoiding the Worst - Letters of Recommendation
- * How Law Schools Evaluate Applications
- * What Law School to Attend
- * Negotiating Scholarships

"Whether you're applying to a top law school or just praying to get in anywhere, you can gain a competitive edge by strategically crafting your game plan," Levine said.
